

I have a right to keep all solicitors from my door by posting a sign stating "No Solicitation" which guarantees my right to privacy. The current law in Indiana which allows me to register on the Indiana Telephone Privacy List guarantees that same right to privacy with my telephone. Any federal law which undermines that right to any degree is a violation of my civil rights to privacy. I understand people have a right to do business but that does not give them the right nor the FCC the right to allow them to forcibly invade my private home at their will. I used to get 5 to 10 calls a day 7 days a week for solicitations. It was to the point I was wasting at least half an hour a day with people trying to sell me windows. I got calls as late as 12:30 at night. If this is not an invasion of privacy I don't know what is. I will, completely on my own if necessary lead a campaign against the FCC for violating my constitutional rights to privacy if they try to enact any law that allows me to receive any phone calls from any solicitors.
